Pacific Southwest Regional Fugitive Task Force

Trong Thai was arrested on March 23, 2005 in North Chicago, Illinois by members of the Great Lakes Regional Fugitive Task Force (GLRFTF), based on information provided by the Pacific Southwest Regional Fugitive Task Force (PSWRFTF). Thai, a member of the “Asian Crip Boys” (ACB) street gang, was wanted by the Westminster, California Police Department for murder, attempted murder, gang activity on school grounds, and criminal conspiracy. The charges against Thai stem from a July 1999 shooting incident involving members of the ACB and a rival gang. Thai and several other gang members allegedly engaged in a 4-mile running gun battle through three cities in the Orange County area. A 16-year-old victim was killed during the exchange. Thai was indicted in connection with the case by an Orange County Grand Jury in January 2005. On March 1, 2005, the case was referred to the PSWRFTF for investigation and apprehension. PSWRFTF and Orange County Sheriff’s Department (OCSA) investigators determined that Thai was believed to have enlisted in the United States Navy in 2000. With the assistance of the United States Naval Criminal Investigative Service (NCIS), investigators confirmed Thai’s whereabouts and determined that he was attending an advanced training class at the Great Lakes Naval Training Center. On March 23, 2005, GLRFTF investigators and NCIS agents arrested Thai in a classroom at the naval base and booked him at a local jail to await rendition to California.

Mayes removed the victim’s jewelry while the victim lay unconscious on the ground following the assault. On March 24, 2005, members of the NY/NJ Regional Fugitive Task Force developed information that Mayes was living with an associate in Franklin Township, New Jersey. Task Force members established surveillance on the apartment complex and observed Mayes exit the complex and enter a vehicle. Task Force members positioned their vehicles around the fugitive’s vehicle, identified themselves, and requested that he exit. Mayes then attempted to escape by using his vehicle to ram one of the task force vehicles. Task Force members then forcibly gained entry into the subject's vehicle and placed him in custody without further incident.

Southeast Regional Fugitive Task Force

On March 24, 2005, investigators from the Southeast Regional Fugitive Task Force (SERFTF), in conjunction with the U.S. Marshals Technical Operations Group (TOG), captured suspected murderer John Lewis Mills at a motel in Stone Mountain, Georgia. Mills was wanted by the Greenville, South Carolina Sheriff's Office for the March 18, 2005, shooting of a thirteen-year-old boy in Greenville, South Carolina. On that evening, the victim was riding in a car with his mother, stepfather, and two sisters when he was shot during an attempted armed robbery and carjacking. The family had become lost and took a wrong turn into an apartment complex. As the boy's mother, who was driving, attempted to make a u-turn in a cul-de-sac, three males approached the car, brandished firearms, and demanded money and jewelry as well as the woman's purse. When she refused and attempted to reverse, one of the males fired into the car, striking the boy in the chest and killing him. All three males fled on foot and avoided apprehension at that time. Later that evening, an anonymous call was made to investigators stating that Mills was the shooter. A photo array was subsequently shown to the family and they positively identified Mills as being the one who fired the fatal shot. After an investigation in South Carolina revealed that Mills may have fled to the Atlanta area, a collateral lead was forwarded to the SERFTF. With the help of TOG, Mills was tracked to a motel in the Stone Mountain, Georgia area. As investigators entered the room and attempted to place Mills under arrest, the subject struggled briefly and had to be subdued with the use of a Tazer device. Mills has a 'rap sheet' approximately ten pages long. He has twenty-eight prior arrests including sixteen for narcotics, seven for robbery, and three for assault and battery.
